

The rearrangement of a complete single source is in contrast to an assemblage of varied materials making something beyond the individual parts. The result here is wholly determined by a system, which, although disruptive, adds and subtracts nothing; it remains identical, albeit fragmented.

