goggle: oscillating movement (Middle English: unrecorded). The Early English Text Society is a publication society founded in 1864 dedicated to the editing and publishing of early English texts, especially those only available in manuscript.

yellowhammer: nest drawing by Allen W. Seaby, in British Birds and their nests by Brian Vesey-Fitzgerald, 1954. There is usually three or four eggs in a clutch, and often two or three clutches in the year. There is a variation in the ground, from dirty white to buff. The markings vary a little more, consisting of black or pale pinkish brown lines or scribbles.

"Folded, these books are no larger than ordinary text-books—opened out, they show, not the usual two pages, but six or eight pages at once. The whole lesson lies before the eye in picture and story, and the pictures can be compared with any others in the book." The Look and Learn Geography Course, editor E. A. Craddock; London, n.d. "Made and Printed in England by Hazell, Watson & Viney, Aylesbury and London."
